Q: Defining a Macro that will be assigned to a variable and expanded at runtime Is it possible to define a macro that will be used in such a way that it is assigned to a variable and then expanded at runtime? In the following: `#define foo(...)` it is also useful if `foo` expands to a given value when loaded into the program. For example, I have several variables that I would want to temporarily set their names using macros. A: Define a token and then define a macro that takes that token: `#include #define MYMACRO(name) name int main() { MYMACRO(func1); MYMACRO(func2); MYMACRO(func3); return 0; }` Here, `funcN` is expanded to `funcN` at compile time, when `MYMACRO` is defined, so that `funcN` contains the value of `name`. Note that the macro has to be a non-reserved word. A: `#define NAMED(name,...) name __VA_ARGS__ int main(void) { NAMED(hello, "world!"); return 0; }` Will create a variable called `name` with the value "world!", because `__VA_ARGS__` is expanded during compilation, when the preprocessor sees `NAMED`. You are here China's "new normal" economy The late Chinese premier Zhao Ziyang wrote a well-known essay in 1987 titled "The New Normal of China." In the essay, Zhao explained that the rule of law in China could not be introduced too quickly, because if China did not come to its senses soon, an uprising on a large scale might take place. At the same time, China would not "capitulate" to the West. He was even willing to go so far as to use nuclear weapons to defend China's sovereignty. Zhao concluded by warning that "dictatorship will not be overcome by dictatorship." The regime of repression and dictatorship under the current leadership of Chinese President Xi Jinping does seem to be on a path of overreaction. This is not an entirely new phenomenon. After all

Q: Find all integer solutions of  $(x+y)^4 = 2^x \cdot 3^y$  Find all integer solutions of the equation  $x^4+4xy^3+y^4+4x+4y = 2^x \cdot 3^y$  It seems to me that this equation has no solution, but I've tried to find a counterexample. Here's the best I could do... The given equation can be factorized as  $(x-y)^2 \cdot (x+y-1)^2$  Then I've checked that each factor of  $x+y-1$  is greater than 1, and tried to find a counterexample of the form  $(x-y)^2=(x+y-1)^n$  with  $x,y$  being large and  $n$  being small. But I didn't manage to find a suitable counterexample. Do you know of a way to prove that there is no solution? A: Dividing by  $2^x 3^y$  and writing this as  $2^x 3^y (1+z)=1$ , where  $z=2y+1$  yields the equation  $2^x=3^z$  which has no integer solutions. ) can be a tricky thing to accomplish in the modern professional context, but that's what it takes in order to excel in the modern world. So, now, it's your turn. Hot-Seat Mentoring is a program offered by the National Association of Law Placement that gives the graduates of J.D. programs the chance to practice law while getting paid to do so, for free. All you have to do is choose a grad school, log onto the NALP website to find a grad, get a referral from a current grad or judge, and get introduced to an attorney in your state who'd be willing to mentor you. Sounds easy, right? It's getting down to crunch time, class is just days away and you're starting to panic. If you're in a large class you may wonder whether you will be assigned a lawyer who will have time to mentor you, let alone attend to any individual needs you may have. Jonathan Davis is a New York-based attorney and
